Day 4 starts with breakfast at the hotel and participants will be taken shopping. Bandung is not Paris but when it comes to fashion, the capital of West Java has plenty to offer. From a leather craft center to an old market dated as far as the early 19th century, Bandung is Indonesia's second fashion capital after Jakarta.

Whether you're a shopaholic or not, the city called Paris van Java has an array of shopping spots that will lure you into shopping spree. Bandung's fashion markets are known for its good quality, local design, and affordable price. Each spot usually has its own uniqueness ranging from Moslem fashion to leather goods.

Pasar Baru or "New Market" is actually one of Bandung oldest market. Founded in 1884, Pasar Baru Trade Center is now known as the best place to shop for local clothes in Bandung. You'll find various kind of textile, clothing, batik, bags, Moslem wear and praying mats. Just like any other traditional markets, in order to get the best price, haggling with the shopkeepers are welcomed here.

Cihampelas is an area where you can find many unique shops selling affordable locally made clothes. It is one the busiest shopping spots in Bandung, especially in the weekend. Various kind of clothing are available here: jackets, jeans, t-shirt, even costumes. In here you can find "I Love Bandung" t-shirts and replica of local football club Persib jersey.

Home to Indonesia's many textile factories, the city of Bandung offers a large number of factory outlets where Jakarta shoppers regularly flock to, to find the latest trendy apparel at reasonable prices. Those planning to travel to cool climates will stock on warm clothing here in Bandung. You will find Factory outlets or distribution stores (known as Distros) dotting the main Dago avenue (now called Jalan Ir H Juanda), along Jalan Riau (officially kown as Jalan RE Martadinata), beautiful colonial homes, for which Bandung was once famous.
